All 23 names on the Squamish "Roll Call of Honour" have successfully been authenticated. Our lads died fighting for Canada and our freedom! Their names below, and their military stories herein, are remembered! Note: The 2012 and 2013 issue of the BC/YUKON Command Military Service Recognition Book also has published their military stories. Beginning in 1946, the Royal Canadian Legion Diamond Head Branch 277 has conducted a yearly Remembrance Day Service and ensures their names are read out. For many years the service took place indoors at the Brennan Park Recreation Centre. The service returned to the Stan Clarke Park in 2016 due to the community attendance exceeded building safety regulations. The War Memorial Cenotaph, surrounded with 23 birch trees commemorates the 23 names on Roll Call of Honour. Since 1921, the Poppy has stood as a symbol of Remembrance; our visual pledge to never forget all those Canadians who have fallen in war and military operations.

Private Donald McDonald

Donald McDonald was born March 1, 1881 at Bayhead, Isle of North Uist; Scotland. Donald immigrated to Canada and dwelled within the Squamish Community. Donald enlisted with the 29th Battalion on June 28th, 1915 at Vernon, BC. He was trained for Canadian Infantry. Private Donald McDonald was sent overseas and arrived in England 23Nov1915. His unit embarked for France 15Apr1916 to serve in the trench warfare during the later part of the Second Battle of Ypres. On September 11th, 1916, during the Battle of the Somme, Private Donald McDonald and four others; were killed in action. His group came under heavy shelling while they were constructing a forward parallel trench. He is commemorated in perpetuity by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. RCL Diamond Head Branch 277 ensures Donald McDonald, and all the 23 names on the Squamish "Roll Call of Honour", are read out each year during the Remembrance Day Service.

Historical Information

On the opening day of the Battle of Arras, 9 April 1917, the four divisions of the Canadian Corps, fighting side by side for the first time, scored a huge tactical victory in the capture of the 60 metre high Vimy Ridge. After the war, the highest point of the ridge was chosen as the site of the great memorial to all Canadians who served their country in battle during the First World War, and particularly to the 60,000 who gave their lives in France. It also bears the names of 11,000 Canadian servicemen who died in France - many of them in the fight for Vimy Ridge - who have no known grave. The memorial was designed by W.S. Allward. It was unveiled by King Edward VIII on 26 July 1936.

Private George Paddy

George Paddy was born January 22, 1871 in Cornwall, England. George, a Squamish Valley farmer, enlisted with the 1st Canadian Pioneers, an engineering/construction battalion that was organized at Esquimalt on December 4, 1915. His battalion arrived in England January 10th, and embarked for France March 9th for overseas service in France and Belgium. George Paddy died during the battle of Sorrel on June 22, 1916 at the age of 45. Private George Paddy is remembered with honour at the Ypres (Menin Gate) Memorial in the West Flanders town of Ypres (leper), Belgium. Each night at 8 PM the traffic is stopped at the Menin Gate while members of the local Fire Brigade sound the Last Post in the roadway under the Memorial's arches. The memorial now bears the names of more than 54000 Commonwealth officers and men who died in the area of Ypres Salient, and whose graves are not known. George is commemorated in perpetuity by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. RCL Diamond Head Branch 277 ensures George Paddy, and all the 23 names on the Squamish "Roll Call of Honour", is read out each year during the Remembrance Day Service.

The Squamish Stan Clarke Park Cenotaph is located on what was once the Paddy farm.

Historical Information

The Menin Gate is one of four memorials to the missing in Belgian Flanders which cover the area known as the Ypres Salient. The Salient was formed during the First Battle of Ypres in October and November 1914, when a small British Expeditionary Force succeeded in securing the town before the onset of winter, pushing the German forces back to the Passchendaele Ridge. The Second Battle of Ypres began in April 1915 when the Germans released poison gas into the Allied lines north of Ypres. This was the first time gas had been used by either side, and the violence of the attack forced an Allied withdrawal and a shortening of the line of defence.

There was little more significant activity on this front until 1917, when in the Third Battle of Ypres an offensive was mounted by Commonwealth forces to divert German attention from a weakened French front further south. The initial attempt in June to dislodge the Germans from the Messines Ridge was a complete success, but the main assault north-eastward, which began at the end of July, quickly became a dogged struggle against determined opposition and the rapidly deteriorating weather. The campaign finally came to a close in November with the capture of Passchendaele.

The German offensive of March 1918 met with some initial success, but was eventually checked and repulsed in a combined effort by the Allies in September.

The battles of the Ypres Salient claimed many lives on both sides and it quickly became clear that the commemoration of members of the Commonwealth forces with no known grave would have to be divided between several different sites.

The site of the Menin Gate was chosen because of the hundreds of thousands of men who passed through it on their way to the battlefields.

The YPRES (MENIN GATE) MEMORIAL now bears the names of more than 54,000 officers and men whose graves are not known. The memorial, designed by Sir Reginald Blomfield with sculpture by Sir William Reid-Dick, was unveiled by Lord Plumer on 24 July 1927.

Historical Information

In the last week of September 1944, the Allies held the city of Antwerp, but the Germans held both shores of the Scheldt estuary, so that the port of Antwerp could not be used. The task of clearing the southern shore of the estuary was allotted to the 3rd Canadian Division, aided by the 4th Canadian Armoured Division and the 52nd Division. Their operations lasted from October until the beginning of November 1944; by 3 November the Germans had been cleared from the north-west corner of Belgium and the south shore of the Scheldt was free. There had been fierce fighting for two weeks for the crossing of the Leopold Canal.

The majority of the men buried at Adegem died during the operations for the clearance of the south bank of the Scheldt, but many Canadians who lost their lives elsewhere in Belgium were also brought here for burial. A number of isolated graves from various communal cemeteries and churchyards in Belgium have also been brought into this cemetery since the end of the war. The cemetery now contains 1,119 Commonwealth burials of the Second World War and one unidentified burial of the First World War. There are also 33 Polish and two French burials.

Flight Lieutenant Kenneth Allan Buckley

Kenneth Alan (Mike) Buckley was born in Squamish, British Columbia February 20th, 1920. He had worked for the PGE railway as a railroader doing electric welding and was a Carman's apprentice prior to enlisting with the Royal Canadian Air force 257 Squadron, on September 10th, 1940. He was sent overseas April 19, 1943 to England. Kenneth Buckley died on March 1st, 1944, while the squadron was on a flying exercise in cloud over West Hartling, England. His aircraft was reported diving vertically and went straight into the ground and burst into flames. Flight Lieutenant Kenneth Allan (Mike) Buckley is remembered with honour at the Brookwood Military Cemetery, in Surrey, United Kingdom (30 miles from London). He is commemorated in perpetuity by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. RCL Diamond Head Branch 277 ensures Kenneth Allan Buckley, and all the 23 names on the Squamish "Roll Call of Honour", is read out each year during the Remembrance Day Service.

Local forester John F. Jacobsen, Empire Mills superintendent and initiator of the 1939-42 Squamish Community Forest and J.A. Quick Memorial Forest tree-planting projects in the Cheekye Fan, has written in his memoirs: "I wish to record that my most enthusiastic helpers were John Askey Quick, Joe Seymour and Mike Buckley, who ... went to war, and became casualties."

Historical Information

BROOKWOOD MILITARY CEMETERY is the largest Commonwealth war cemetery in the United Kingdom, covering approximately 37 acres. In 1917, an area of land in Brookwood Cemetery (The London Necropolis) was set aside for the burial of men and women of the forces of the Commonwealth and Americans, who had died, many of battle wounds, in the London district. This site was further extended to accommodate the Commonwealth casualties of the Second World War. There is a large Royal Air Forces section in the south-east corner of the cemetery (which also contains the graves of Czech and American airmen who served with the Royal Air Force) and the Air Forces shelter building nearby houses the register of the names of those buried in the section. A plot in the west corner of the cemetery contains approximately 2,400 Canadian graves of the Second World War including those of 43 men who died of wounds following the Dieppe Raid in August 1942. The Canadian Records building, which was a gift of the Canadian government, houses a reception room for visitors and other offices. Brookwood Military Cemetery now contains 1,601 Commonwealth burials of the First World War and 3,476 from the Second World War. Of the Second World War burials 5 are unidentified, 3 being members of the R.A.F. and 2 being members of the R.C.A.F. The war graves of other nationalities in the Commission's care number 786 including 28 unidentified French.

As an agency service on behalf of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, the Commission also maintains a plot of the graves of Chelsea Pensioners, which is situated adjacent to the Military Cemetery, and a small plot containing the graves of 12 members of the nursing services in the adjoining Brookwood Cemetery is also in the Commission's care.

The BROOKWOOD MEMORIAL stands at the southern end of the Canadian section of the cemetery and commemorates 3,500 men and women of the land forces of the Commonwealth who died during the Second World War and have no known grave, the circumstances of their death being such that they could not appropriately be commemorated on any of the campaign memorials in the various theatres of war. They died in the campaign in Norway in 1940, or in the various raids on enemy occupied territory in Europe such as Dieppe and St Nazaire. Others were special agents who died as prisoners or while working with Allied underground movements. Some died at sea, in hospital ships and troop transports, in waters not associated with the major campaigns, and a few were killed in flying accidents or in aerial combat.

The BROOKWOOD (UNITED KINGDOM 1914-18) MEMORIAL was created in 2004. It commemorates casualties who died in the United Kingdom during the First World War but for whom no graves could be found.

John Anthony Dalton was born in Dublin, Ireland July 14th, 1911. His parents and John immigrated to Canada two years later. John worked at the Britannia Beach Mines for two years prior to enlisting with the Royal Canadian Air force January 14, 1942. John qualified as a Pilot Officer (Air Bomber) on November 6, 1942. He was sent overseas to England shortly thereafter. On the evening of April 28th, 1943 at 20.49 hrs Wellington Bomber HZ280 took off from Kirmingtom, near Ulceby, Lincolnshire, to lay mines in a massive Gardening operation – laying mines to create a coastal blockade. These operations were usually carried out at low level which made it hard for the Luftwaffe night fighters to intercept. It did mean, however, they were extremely vulnerable to flak units. This operation proved to be the highest percentage loss to Bomber Command during mine-laying of the war. 9 aircraft were shot down by night fighters and a further 13 destroyed by the multi barrel flak. Seven other aircraft were also damaged but managed to return home. It was also the heaviest mine dropping mission of the war with 207 aircraft taking part. A total of 145 aircrew were killed; 4 others were became POW. On April 29th, at 0103 hrs, Wellington Bomber HZ278, was hit with flak and crashed near the village of Odum, Denmark. John was the air bomber for this aircraft and was one of the four of the five onboard who died. The Pilot became a POW. Pilot Officer (Air Bomber) John Anthony Dalton is remembered with honour at the Esbjerg (Fourfelt) Cemetery, Denmark. He is commemorated in perpetuity by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. Historical Information

Allied forces entered the Netherlands on 12 September 1944. Airborne operations later that month established a bridgehead at Nijmegen and in the following months, coastal areas and ports were cleared and secured, but it was not until the German initiated offensive in the Ardennes had been repulsed that the drive into Germany could begin.

Most of those buried in GROESBEEK CANADIAN WAR CEMETERY were Canadians, many of whom died in the Battle of the Rhineland, when the 2nd and 3rd Canadian Infantry Divisions and the 4th Canadian Armoured Division took part in the drive southwards from Nijmegen to clear the territory between the Maas and the Rhine in February and March 1945. Others buried here died earlier or later in the southern part of the Netherlands and in the Rhineland.

The cemetery contains 2,610 Commonwealth burials of the Second World War, and nine war graves of other nationalities.

Within the cemetery stands the GROESBEEK MEMORIAL, which commemorates by name more than 1,000 members of the Commonwealth land forces who died during the campaign in north-west Europe between the time of crossing the Seine at the end of August 1944 and the end of the war in Europe, and whose graves are not know.

Flying Oficer (Nav) Frank Thorburn Manners

Frank Thorburn Manners was born in Edmonton, Alberta, June 15, 1920. His family later moved to Squamish. His dad operated a grocery store. Frank enlisted with the RCAF 428 Squadron in Vancouver, October 22nd, 1941. He was trained to be an air navigator. Frank arrived overseas in the UK November 9th, 1942. F/O Frank Manners's last mission was a September 27th, 1943. It was a bombing raid to Hanover, Germany, involving 678 aircraft – 312 Lancasters, 231 Halifaxes, 111 Stirlings, 24 Wellingtons and 5 B-17s. 38 Bomber Command aircraft were lost, almost 6 per cent of the force – including Manners's Halifax II #JB968 with seven crew members. RCAF Squadron 428's Halifax aircraft #JB968 was shot down September 27th by a German Luftwaffe fighter after being initially disabled by anti-aircraft artillery. The fate of Frank Manners and his six fellow crew members was not confirmed until March 1944, when information was received through the International Red Cross from German sources. Post war investigation concluded this Halifax Bomber suffered severe flak damage and struck the ground with great force and burned upon impact. All seven on board died near Kalischacht (10 km's southwest of Hanover). Frank Thorburn Manners is remembered with honour at the Hanover War Cemetery, in Hannover, Germany. He is commemorated in perpetuity by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. RCL Diamond Head Branch 277 ensures Frank Thorburn Manners, and all the 23 names on the Squamish "Roll Call of Honour", is read out each year during the Remembrance Day Service.

Cemetery: Coriano Ridge War Cemetery (XIII.D.9), Italy (3.5 kilometres west of Riccione, a seaside resort on the Adriatic coast).

Private Keith Nicholson

Keith Nicholson was born in McBride, BC, August 9th, 1918. Keith worked as a section man with the PGE Railway prior to enlisting with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in Victoria, BC March 29th, 1940. Keith was sent overseas to the UK June 14, 1941. He embarked for Italy June 28, 1943. The Allies invaded the Italian mainland on 3 September 3rd, 1943. Following the fall of Rome to the Allies in June 1944, the German retreat was orderly with successive stands being made. The Allies breached the Gothic Line, in the northern Appenine Mountains, but the advance stalled as winter set in. The Germans dug in to a number of key defensive positions, with the Coriano Ridge remaining the last important ridge for the Allied advance. The allies eventually took the Ridge with heavy casualties sustained. Private Keith Nicholson was killed in action December 22nd, 1944. Private Keith Nicholson is remembered with honour at the Coriano Ridge War Cemetery in Italy. He is commemorated in perpetuity by the Commonwealth War Graves Commission. RCL Diamond Head Branch 277 ensures Keith Nicholson, and all the 23 names on the Squamish "Roll Call of Honour" are read out each year during the Remembrance Day Service.

Historical Information

On 3 September 1943 the Allies invaded the Italian mainland, the invasion coinciding with an armistice made with the Italians who then re-entered the war on the Allied side.

Following the fall of Rome to the Allies in June 1944, the German retreat became ordered and successive stands were made on a series of defensive lines. In the northern Appenine mountains the last of these, the Gothic Line, was breached by the Allies during the Autumn campaign and the front inched forward as far as Ravenna in the Adratic sector, but with divisions transferred to support the new offensive in France, and the Germans dug in to a number of key defensive positions, the advance stalled as winter set in.

Coriano Ridge was the last important ridge in the way of the Allied advance in the Adriatic sector in the autumn of 1944. Its capture was the key to Rimini and eventually to the River Po. German parachute and panzer troops, aided by bad weather, resisted all attacks on their positions between 4 and 12 September 1944. On the night of 12 September the Eighth Army reopened its attack on the Ridge, with the 1st British and 5th Canadian Armoured Divisions. This attack was successful in taking the Ridge, but marked the beginning of a week of the heaviest fighting experienced since Cassino in May, with daily losses for the Eighth Army of some 150 killed.

The site for the cemetery was selected in April 1945 and was created from graves brought in from the surrounding battlefields. Coriano Ridge War Cemetery contains 1,939 Commonwealth burials of the Second World War.

Dundalk, Jan. 17 (Special) -- Two splo-flying pilots from No. 8

S.F.T.S., Dunnville, lost their lives today when their planes met in midair and plummetted to the ground a half-mile distant. The accident occurred at Proton Station, six miles north-west of here. Several residents of the district saw the planes meet, heard the noise of impact and saw them crash to the ground, where they burst into flames. Walter Acheson, on whose farm the planes crashed, and other nearby farmers rushed to the burning planes and pulled the dead airmen from the planes. David Reddick, over whose farm the planes met, said he saw one plane come up under the other and saw parts of both planes fall towards the ground following the impact. R.C.A.F. personnel from Camp Borden, 35 miles north-east of here, took charge of the bodies, which are now at a local undertaking parlor.

Historical Information

On 3 September 1943 the Allies invaded the Italian mainland, the invasion coinciding with an armistice made with the Italians who then re-entered the war on the Allied side. Allied objectives were to draw German troops from the Russian front and more particularly from France, where an offensive was planned for the following year. The Royal Palace at Caserta served as headquarters for the Allied armies in Italy for the greater part of the duration of the Italian campaign and the 2nd General Hospital was at Caserta from December 1943 until September 1945. Some of those buried here died in the hospital, others as prisoners of war (there was a POW Hospital at Caserta) before the Allied invasion. There are also a few burials from the October 1943 fighting on the River Volturno, which lies not far away to the north. Caserta War Cemetery contains 768 Commonwealth burials of the Second World War. The cemetery was designed by Louis de Soissons.
